

Press Clippings

Publication : DNA (After hrs)
Edition : Mumbai
Date : Friday, April 29, 2016
Page No. : 6

Sushilkumar Agrawal, CEO, Mintage World and Chief Minister Devendra Fadnavis at the website launch event

Now, coins and stamps go online

With www.mintageworld.com, an online portal for numismatics, notaphily and philately experts aim to target the youth as well as scholars

Jayadev Calamur @NotJDSalinger

With the objective of reintroducing the joy in variety of coins, currency notes and stamps, www.mintageworld.com, an online museum for the same was launched by Maharashtra Chief Minister Devendra Fadnavis.

Along with Sushilkumar Agrawal, CEO, Mintage World, the Chief Minister unveiled the website at World Trade Centre (WTC), Cuffe Parade. The event coincided with Shukla Day, the annual event held at WTC to showcase India's largest annual exhibition on coins, currencies and stamps.

The ultimate resource

Speaking about the website, Agrawal said, "The purpose of this site is to impart knowledge and interest in the areas of numismatics, notaphily and philately to the general public, collectors, students and scholars alike. Mintage World is the first website of its kind in the world where it provides all three domains under one roof."

While exploring the website, we saw that it had enough information to educate contemporary India and the world about our rich heritage, tradition and culture. In addition, people seeking information will find detailed catalogues of stamps, coins and currency notes.

A collectible's delight

"The sole vision behind this initiative is to provide a single point of access to seek and share information and knowledge about these three fields along with their global updates. It brings together experts and researchers to share their experience with the lovers of these rare collectibles," said Agrawal.

jayadev.calamur@dnaindia.net

Ancient

Medieval

Modern